

Guidelines for school management committees unveiled

Express News Service
New Delhi, May 6

THE UNION Education Ministry released guidelines for school management committees on Wednesday, recommending that the chairperson and vice-chairperson of each such panel be an elected member from among the parents or guardians. The guidelines suggest that the principal or head of the school be the member secretary of the committee, which will have two sub-committees — an academic committee and a school building committee. Releasing the guidelines, Education Minister Dharmendra Pradhan said that the concept of school management committees is not new, and they have existed in different forms before this, but there is a need to make the committees part of the school education culture. The new guidelines, align with the National Education Policy 2020.

JABALPUR CRUISE MISHAP

Court orders FIR against operator, says crew fled without rescuing passengers

Anand Mohan J
Bhopal, May 6

A DISTRICT court in Madhya Pradesh's Jabalpur district has directed police to register an FIR against the operator of the cruise boat that capsized in Bargi reservoir on April 30, holding that the crew's "failure" to rescue drowning passengers could amount to serious criminal offences.

Taking suo motu cognisance of media reports and social media coverage of the incident, Judicial Magistrate First Class D P Sutrakar ordered the Bargi police station to lodge an FIR and report back to the court within two days.

In the order dated May 5, the court observed that the boat operator allegedly drove the vessel "negligently", leading to the sinking that killed several passengers. The magistrate noted the operator, despite being familiar with the functioning of the vessel, "left drowning persons and escaped safely himself". "The vessel operator, despite being familiar with the activities tion 110 relating to attempt to commit culpable homicide," the order read.

The court opined that if an FIR is not registered and investigation is not carried out in the matter, then in "future operators of cruises or boats may similarly abandon other persons during mishaps, leading to repetition of such incidents," the order stated.

The magistrate said the court was taking suo motu cognisance to prevent recurrence of such incidents and ordered that an FIR be registered against the driver present on the boat at the time of the incident as well as other crew members.

The April 30 boat tragedy in the Bargi dam area of Jabalpur district had claimed 13 lives after a cruise ship reportedly overturned during an evening ride.

Bedsheet barcode led police to Vadodara woman's murderer — her male friend

Investigators traced the barcode to a Vadodara outlet. CCTV footage from the store was then scanned. EXPRESS

Aditi Raja
Vadodara, May 6

DIVYA PARMAR, 22, had left her home in Vadodara, informing her family that she had a freelance assignment for mehendi design. Her brother received a "text reply" late evening stating that she would be back after taking the payment from her client, but Divya never returned. A day later, her family found itself running to a hospital in panic, chancing upon a viral image of an unidentified body, while scrolling through social media. Their worst fears had come true.

Divya's body was found from Ankodia village near Vadodara on Monday evening, wrapped in a bedsheet with a wire tangled around her neck -- and identified by her family at the hospital. On Tuesday, the body was sent for postmortem and a case of murder was lodged at Vadodara Taluka police station.

Her family had lodged a missing persons complaint at the JP Road police station in Vadodara city.

Police said the investigation progressed on two parallel tracks — identifying the victim and tracing the accused. Police teams first compiled recent missing persons complaints across city and rural police stations and began matching details such as age, clothing, and last known movements with the unidentified body found in Ankodia. This helped establish Divya's identity quickly, with the help of her family's missing persons' complaint.

Simultaneously, forensic examination of the scene yielded a key clue: a supermarket tag with a product barcode still attached to the bedsheet in which the body had been wrapped. Investigators traced the barcode to a D-Mart outlet in Vadodara and accessed purchase records to narrow down potential buyers. CCTV footage from the store was then scanned to identify the buyer. Correlating the footage with Divya's acquaintances, the police zeroed in on Rohan Vanakar alias Parmar.

On Wednesday, the Vadodara city police nabbed Parmar - a native of Koshinga in Bodoli in Chhota Udepur. He worked at a popular cafe in the upscale area of Akota while Divya was employed at a private hospital, right across the street. The two had become close since about six months but recently, Parmar had begun doubting Divya's fidelity, police said.

Vadodara district Superintendent of Police Sushilkumar Agrawal told The Indian Express that Parmar had "planned the murder for close to a week". "In our interrogation, we have inferred that the accused had become very attached to the victim during the past few months... However, he claims that when she began ignoring his calls and withdrawing her attention in the recent weeks, it left him insecure... He began suspecting her of being involved with another man and he said his doubts were confirmed recently. The murder was premeditated," Agrawal said.

He added that the bedsheet had provided a vital clue to the police. "The bedsheet was new and it appeared that the accused had purchased it either as part of his preparation for the murder or right after committing the crime. Scanning the CCTV footage and matching it with the accused as well as the missing persons record, which was also manually done to match the age and characteristics was an arduous task performed in a record time," Agrawal said.

On Wednesday, Parmar was produced in a court, which sent him to six-day police custody.

Police Inspector J K Dangar of Vadodara Taluka police station told this newspaper, "On Sunday, Divya told her family that she had a mehendi design appointment, but she went out with Parmar. The two had a heated argument and Parmar strangled her with a wire. He then dumped her body, wrapped in a sheet in the village... While the wire - which is the weapon of crime - had been recovered with the body, we are yet to recover her phone, which is crucial evidence to establish the motive..."

Dangar added that the forensic probe of the phone will reveal if the text message received by her brother was actually sent by the victim on Sunday.
